

KHMER ALONG WITH ME

Make Anantara Angkor Resort your luxurious base in Siem Reap and accept the invitation of your very own 'experience butler' to explore a dizzying range of cultural quests

Sunrise or sunset? That is the million-dollar question when you want to see the lotus-bud towers of Angkor Wat against the most atmospheric backdrop. For the ultimate once-in-a-lifetime experience (and who hasn't got Angkor Wat on their bucket list?), why not build your own series of immersive adventures in this ancient complex of temples? After all, both Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom and Tomb Raider were filmed here in the Cambodian jungle.

A 15-minute drive from the Unesco-protected site, Anantara Angkor Resort has a menu of 45 excursions including quad biking through rice paddies, zip-lining through a jungle canopy or motorbike riding up to a sacred mountain. The on-the-ground knowledge of the resort's 'experience butlers' is as mystical as the energy that shrouds this intriguing 400sqkm site.

How's this for an unforgettable day? Witness the dawn sun filter through the ornate skyline of Angkor Wat temple, then discover the world's most unique running track winding through the archaeological park. Join the resort's temple guru, Tong Ham, for a sunrise salute and tour, before an American Army jeep whisks you to a private lunch amid the jungle-shrouded ruins of a hidden 12th-century temple. After a day of discovery, you then relax during a 'Dining by Design' journey in a traditional wooden house, savouring fine wines and Khmer-French fusion cuisine as your personal experience butler regales stories of village life and the spirit ceremonies in the nearby pagoda.

Following an extensive renovation that has established Anantara as the top-class all-suite retreat, you will want to stay in Siem Reap's swishest presidential suites: the two-bedroom Henri Moutot (for up to six guests) and the one-bedroom Anantara Explorer Suite – each the epitome of old-world Khmer summer-house sophistication with silk furnishings, marble bathrooms and oversized rain showers, a private spa room with Jacuzzi bath tub, a plunge pool in an enclosed private garden, and, of course, the personal attention of a butler intent on epic fun.
